LaGuardia Sincere in Purpose Says Miss Darrin in Third Talk

The third in a series of lectures upon current events was given in the study hall of Addison High School on Monday evening by Miss Katherine M. Darrin. Topics discussed included "changes in government", financial policies" and others of equal interest.

In her opening remarks Miss Darrin referred to the political overturn in New York City which swept Mayor LaGuardia into office. She credited the new executive with being sincere of purpose and desirous of giving New York the highest and best type of honest and efficient government. "One of his most outstanding acts", she declared, "is the appointment of Major - General O'Ryan as Commissioner of Police. La Guardia says there is no reason why New York should not have a police force which is every bit as efficient as that of London."

The lecturer then told of a personal experience in London last summer when she left a valuable article in a taxicab. Much disturbed at its loss, she was surprised that all with whom she discussed the matter had absolute confidence in its return. She went to Scotland Yard, the headquarters of the London detective force, and the lost article was there. She was obliged, however, to pay a specified sum in order to reclaim it. In this way all taxi-drivers receive a suitable reward for the return of lost articles, and the penalties for failure to do so are heavy.

"One of the great problems that LaGuardia has to meet is the financial problem", said Miss Darrin. She told of the mayor's trip to Washington in order to ask for money with which to complete the Eighth Avenue subway. He was told that the money would be forthcoming if the municipal budget was balanced by February 1st. The mayor's discussion with Governor Lehman, which resulted in a compromise with the desired budgetary powers vested in the Board of Estimates, were explained.

In discussing state politics, Miss Darrin stated that for a decade past neither the Democratic party nor the Republican party has had full control of the government at Albany. "It is much better," she declared, "to have one party in complete control. Then the people can place full responsibility". She later referred to the factional strip in each of the two party organizations of the state. The Democrats, she classified as the "old guard Tammanyites", and the "Liberals", the latter a group headed by Chairman Farley which is supposed to enjoy the sympathy of the Washington administration. Another group of New York City Democrats has at least temporarily been absorbed into the Fusion movement in the metropolis.

In the Republican ranks Miss Darrin referred to the charges of Chairman Macy directed at former Chairman Machold and others who were supposed to be able to influence legislation. She classified the G. O. P. as being likewise divided

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

An earthquake shook India early this week killing at least 2,000 persons and causing inestimatable damages. Thousands of buildings and hundreds of villages are said to have been shaken into ruins by the quake that gripped the peninsula. Only the most causual view of the damages can yet be made as sections are viewed from the air. All telegraph lines are down and other means of communication disrupted. Many days will probably lapse before a really accurate estimate can be made of the property damage.

SAVING 25 BILLIONS

The American statistician, Roger Babson, says that elimination of waste in this country would create a saving of more than 25 billions each year. And that stopping these huge leaks for a period of ten years would enable us to pay off all our federal, state, municipal, corporate and private debt in the country.

These are eye opening facts to most persons, and when they stop to think that elimination of major waste for one decade, could turn this country into a taxpayers Utopia, it is to be hoped that many will want to enlist in the cause of frugality. Many will wonder just what things could be responsible for the waste of 25 billions a year by the people in America. Babson divides the various kinds of waste into three groups; first that requiring only knowledge and common sense for saving, two, requiring character and education for saving, and three, waste requiring planning and control for saving.

In group one the statistician lists foolish investments, auto accidents, preventable fire losses, ignorant buying of adulterations, and inexcusable management and advertising errors, totaling some eight and one-half billions. Group two includes excessive use of harmful foods, excessive drinking and smoking, unnecessary expenditures on criminals and insane, 25 per cent of the amount spent on cheap resorts, amusements and the like, luxurious clothing, quackery and excessive use of cosmetics, and misdirected educational expenses, amounting to another eight and one-half billions. In group three he notes needless overhead costs due largely to individual dishonesty and carelessness, failure to standardize on simple necessities, employment turn-over losses, preventable miscellaneous accidents, lack of elementary scientific management, obvious inefficient plant location, waste of coal, oil, gas and supplies through 25 million stores, homes and factories, and miscellaneous, eight billions more.

He states that elimination of this waste would throw certain persons out of employment, but that the saving brought would immediately put them back to work building houses and making useful goods. He recommends a campaign by parents, schools, churches and most of all newspapers, which he maintains have in their power more than any other agencies, the moulding of public opinion and direction of people in the course they should pursue.

Babson says, "There is no need for inflation, or any other quack remedy to relieve our burden of debt . . . a few years of sacrifice would wipe it out, together with the annual interest charge of ten billion dollars"

Stated in figures like these, the average man or woman cannot conceive just what this saving would mean to them individually. It would mean in everyday terms that each person would be some $200 a year better off with the elimination of waste. It would mean that every American family would have some $2,400 a year to spend upon the worthwhile things of life. It would mean the elimination of the major portion of the tax burden under which we are staggering, the abolition of mortgage foreclosures and the end of interest paying.

The standards of living could be increased some 100 per cent, and the general health and happiness of all would be immeasurably increased.

Of course, the sudden, complete elimination of this burden of waste cannot be effected in one month, one year, or possibly in one life-time. But, if every person reading this editorial would determine that in-as-far as they individually were concerned this colossal waste must immediately stop then indeed would their own condition be that much improved. And the country would be one step nearer the objective, a happy, debtless nation of people.

It is worth striving for, and best of all is not only does not cost anything, it actually will make you better off financially as well as mentally and physically.

CREDIT WHERE DUE

A columnist in the Portland Oregonian comments on the amazing care with which the federal public works program is being administered. Government engineers employed by the department in charge, are watching at all hours—and if they are seen to fraternize with persons who stand to gain from contracts, they are liable to be summarily dismissed. Every contract, small or large, is investigated and studied by officials to prevent graft and profiteering.

THAT "PLOWED-UP" COTTON

Facts, like "murder" will out, so now the country finally has the much looked-for information regarding the cotton crop and is able to see what benefits the plowing up program has had on the U. S. cotton farmers.

In spite of the fact the AAA spent vast sums as bonuses to farmers in the south who agreed to plow up cotton acreage, the 1933 cotton crop is approximately 13 and a half millian bales— an actual increase over the crop in 1932. What could have done it? Well the cotton farmers are not so dumb, although many of them seem to do their farming in a one horse (or one mule, rather) way. Knowing the government was passing checks around the south to pay for plowed up cotton land, these farmers scratched their heads and came to the same conclusion that the AAA did. They thought the crop would be short and the price much higher. They decided to pull a "fast one" on Uncle Sam—plow up their certain acreage sure, but take some of that bonus money to buy fertilizer and increase the crop on the rest of their farm.

The only flaw in their line of reasoning was, that too many of them thought the same thing and a smaller acreage well fertilized has produced a bigger cotton crop than the country raised a year ago. Now where are we? Well the country has assessed a processing tax on cotton goods, the farmers have spent their money for fertilizer to raise a bigger crop of cotton, and those who wear clothes can now pay higher prices, to make up for the cotton tax.

It worked, just like most experiments will work when several million scattered farmers are expected to hew to the line of thought some man in Washington lays down. Human nature is too strong, and as long as we have individualists you can expect to see every man in the country doing most of his own thinking. That is the way the country was built to where it is today, and by individual effort it will continue to rise, in the long run.

The fact that a little more than 14 million bales is the world's capacity for using cotton, is probably no comfort to those in Washington who watched the dismal failure of the cotton experiment. The Bible teaches against the theory of waste, and its lessons have stood the test of centuries. Man cannot fly in the face of these things, oversetting the laws of human nature as well as the commands of a Divine God and expect such experiments to prosper the race.

LEVEL HEADS IN AN EMERGENCY

Of late, an interesting change is noted in the editorial comment in thousands of American newspapers, particularly country weeklies and smaller city dailies. Editors are questioning and opposing radical and experimental changes in our social and individual structure. An excellent example is afforded by their remarks on the many proposals designed to hamper private development of utilities, and to start subsidized public plants to compete with them.

Editors are observing that the dangers inherent in such a program are greater than promised benefits.

The utility industry has provided the public with excellent service usually at a fairly reasonable price under public regulation. Hundreds of editors are outspoken in saying the industry is entitled to a fair deal, as distinct from political hamstringing.

The editors do not offer these opinions because of any mere desire to favor private utility companies or interests. They have a belief, born of observation and analysis, that the old American system in which private initiative and enterprise has always been of paramount importance, is the best, the soundest and the most workable system to encourage individual ambition and service, the world has yet known. They feel that changes in it should be made gradually, and only after a great deal of careful investigation— and that the changes, when made, should deal with details, and not with fundamental principles.

The future safety and protection of American institutions rests on the ability of American editors to maintain level heads in a time of stress and excitement.

HOMES FOR RECOVERY

There is a growing feeling that, in the course of governmental efforts to stimulate employment and increase the purchasing power, greater stress should be laid upon small home building. That view was recently endorsed by Dr. O. M. Sprague, formerly advisor to the Bank of England and to the United States Treasury.

In this country at present there is a definite shortage of homes—due to population changes, to obsolescence and destruction, and to the almost complete lack of building of this character during the past few years. "Doubling up" of families has become a commonplace. Thousands of structures, which are little more than unhealthy and unsightly fire-traps, are in use and should be eliminated. Thousands of others are going down hill rapidly because of inattention.

A federally sponsored, aggressive home building drive would thus serve a double purpose. It would provide tremendous amounts of employment, both in building homes themselves and in industries supplying materials. It would be a stimulus to the paint, cement, transport, steel, lumber and other basic industries. It would put money in the hands of local merchants and bring the breath of recovery to every town. And it would be providing something essential and permanently valuable.

Clerkship Contest Ended With Appointment of Fred Hammond

Albany, Jan. 16—The contest over the choice of an Assembly Clerk came to an end last Friday afternoon, but without an election. It was one of the most spectaclular legislative battles of recent years, and the story of it at various stages has filled the columns of the daily press. However, a dispassionate summary of the tense drama, act by act, may be interesting, following the example set by the newspapers, which referred to the Hammond supporters as the "Old Guard" and those opposing him as "Liberals."

Political Drama in Eight Acts

Scene—New York Assembly Chamber.

Act 1—The 84 Republican members were called into conference and unanimously agreed upon Joseph A. McGinnies of Chautauqua County as Speaker for his tenth term. They failed, however, to muster the required majority of 76 members for Clerk, one Independent and 19 Liberal Republicans refusing to support for re-election Fred W. Hammond of Syracuse, on the ground that he is identified in the public mind with the power trust and utilities.

Act 2—A caucus was held on nomination of Clerk, which would bind those taking part. Refusing to be thus bound, the 19 Liberal Republicans walked out. The remainder nominated Hammond, but were without the votes to elect him.

Old Guard—Democratic Combine

Act 3—Balloting began and continued from day to day. The 64 Old Guard Republicans voted for Hammond only. Liberal Republicans and the Independent member voted for various candidates and announced they would be satisfied with any good man not allied with the utility or other special interest.

Act 4—Liberals offer resolution authorizing speaker to appoint a member as temporary clerk, and, that being ruled out, offered proposal that Assembly itself select one of its members as temporary clerk, which was defeated by combination of Old Guard and Democrats.

Act 5—Liberals offered resolution asking opinion of Attorney General as to legality of the above two proposals. This also defeated by Old Guard-Democrat-combine.

Two Answers Wired

Act 6—Mayor LaGuardia of New York City wired Speaker McGinnies and Republican State Chairman Macy, urging end of the deadlock. Mr. Macy replied he would be satisfied with any compromise candidate Speaker McGinnies might suggest. Mr. McGinnies wired a criticism of Liberals for refusing to vote for Mr. Hammond and said they had told him it was because of fear of patronage reprisals in New York City—a statement later denied on the floor of the Assembly.

Act 7—Old Guard adopted Liberal plan previously rejected, and without opposition resolution was passed asking Attorney General for opinion as to power of Speaker to appoint Clerk to serve balance of session. Attorney General ruled Assembly might give him such power.

Opposing Betters Both Win

Act 8—Resolution introduced giving Speaker power to appoint Clerk. Mr. McGinnies was asked if he would appoint Fred Hammond, but declined to state. Resolution passed by vote of 76 to 4, Democrats declining to vote. Speaker immediately appointed Hammond and swore him in.

Finale— Thus ended an historic battle, the like of which had not been seen in Albany since 1882, when a similar contest prevented the election of a Clerk until February 15. Those who bet that Hammond would be the clerk of the session have apparently won. But so have those who wagered that he would not be elected. While no claims of any sort were made by any one, there was general gossip about the Capitol that another year will probably see some decided changes there.

First Bill a Power One

Of course no bills could be introduced in the Assembly until a Clerk was elected, but they came pretty fast after that for a time. Apparently it was impossible to get away from the power question which had precipitated the opposition to the re-election of Mr. Hammond, for the very first item of business read by him was a resolution by Assemblyman Canney, Buffalo, Democrat, whereby the Legislature would express opposition to the proposed St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty until an investigation has been made of its effect upon shipping interests and public utilities. It was made a special order of business for today.

Reaction on Rival Forces

An unbiased observer of the situation would have to conclude that neither side of the controversy felt it had attained a victory that warranted any great amount of exuberance. The New York Times remarked that among the old guard which had fought for Mr. Hammond re-election there was "more brooding than boasting". A number of those who had been bombarded with telegrams and letters of criticism of their stand were free to admit that probably some one else would be in their seats next year as a result of being out of tune with their constituents on this matter. It was evident that State Chairman Macy considered the contest only an incident in a general party program, as he stated: "Through Mr. McGinnies' action in the appointment of Mr. Hammond, Mr. Machold is now the undisputed boss of the Assembly. This fight has made the people fully understand the issue, and the decision will be recorded at the primaries this fall."

Negro Member Gets a Laugh

During the battle over the clerkship there was a sustained tensity in the atmosphere of the Assembly chamber which had not been equalled in many long years. There have been in the past many tense moments, but this time they stretched into days and weeks. One of the moments of relief was provided by James E. Stevens, New York City Democrat, the only negro member of the house. "I'm watching this fight for the clerkship", said Stephens, "and at the right moment I'm going to trot out a dark horse who will bring home the bacon". The house roared.

St. Louis All-Stars Took Thrilling Game From Jasper Bluebirds

The Jasper Bluebirds lost one of the most sensational games ever staged on the Jasper Central school hardwood court Thursday evening. Playing the St. Louis All Stars, a girls' professional team, playing only boys' teams throughout the United States, the town team showed that they could take it.

The Jasper team, not used to professional rules, were a little slow at the beginning but soon got under way.

The game held the large crowd that witnessed it in a hilarious mood from start to finish.

Whipple started off the game by a neat shot after a fine pass from Drake, left forward. Following this Melton sunk the first basket for the Stars. The first quarter continued with the Stars gradually getting the lead and ended at quarter time with girls leading 15 to 10.

The boys started off the second quarter a little smoother. Graham started the scoring by making good the first free throw followed by two more foul shots and then a field goal after dribbling nearly the length of the hall and tied the score 15 all. Following this the Stars went through the Birds defense for a two-point gain. The half ended with the All Stars ahead by a few points.

The second half got under way by Hughs making good her foul shot. Then Graham made good his eighth foul shot during the game. The ball went back to center and Woodward, center for Jasper, tipped to Van Skiver and he passed to Whipple who shot, Van Skiver following in and tipped a neat one through the hoop and the rest of the period went rapidly, ending with the girls ahead by 23-21.

The Stars started off the fourth quarter with a field goal by Melton, high scorer for the girls. Following this Graham made a nice throw from the corner and Woodward made two foul shots tieing the score 25-25. The crowd was on their toes then for the time was nearly up but the Jasper boys fouled so that the All Stars made three free throws ending the game with the Stars victors 28-25.

COMMUNICATION

Bath, New York
January 13, 1934

To the Editor of Addison Advertiser,
Addison, New York.
Dear Sir:

For the past few weeks since the Federal Government has been sending surplus foods to this county for distribution, this office has been flooded with requests for various items of food and for information as to who is eligible to receive fods, therefore, I wish to make the following statement for general information.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration in co-operation with other Federal Departments deemed it an advisable policy to expend Federal Funds to purchase surplus farm commodities and that such commodities so purchased with Federal funds were to be distributed under the order and direction of the Federal Relief Administration to relief cases throughout the United States. In our county we are compelled to furnish the Administration with the number of families and individuals actually receiving relief from Welfare Officers of the various Towns together with a list of the number of persons employed on work projects by the County or State Government and including the number of persons in their families. We also submit the number of women receiving Board of Child Walefare allowances together with the number of persons in their families and the number of persons receiving relief through Old Age Security. The total of these cases is the basis for computing by the Federal Government the amount of surplus foods which we shall receive and distribute and the above mentioned types of relief clients are the only ones which the Federal Governments allows to receive surplus foods. The Law requires that such shipments when made by the Federal Governments shall be received by the County Commissioner and distributed under his jurisdiction by the Welfare Officers of the various Towns. These are the mandatory conditions of the Federal Law.

I hope this clarifies this situation as to who can receive surplus foods.

Very truly yours,
E. Ray Hardenbrook
County Commissioner

into "Old Guard" and "Liberal" camps. She then referred to Governor Lehman's message to the legislature which pointed out three absolute situations which ought to be remedied. The first of these was reform of local government; the second, reapportionment; and the third, action with respect to the public interests.

In treating of the last topic from the Governor's message, she said, "The position of the Republican party has been that it is not wise for the government to own or control the public utilities . . The Democratic position has been that the utilities are unduly expensive and that it is much better for the municipality or the state to supply gas, light, etc., at very low rates. In the public mind during the last few years, the Republican party has been associated with the big interests . . a new group within the party which includes Chairman Macy, has come along to challenge this position and we are going to hear much more about the utilities soon.

Relative to the position of legislators who endeavor to serve for the public good, Miss Darrin quoted from a recent magazine article by Booth Tarkington who at one time was a member of the law-making body in the state of Indiana. The famous author phrased it thus, "you are supposed to do exactly as you are told. That's what you are there for . . . to do favors for your friends." Experiences of others in Vermont, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania were also quoted. The action of Senator Huey Long in sending Mrs. Kemp to Congress from Louisiana without so much as the formality of a regular party primary was also discussed.

Miss Darrin stated that in times of depression, people are more discriminating and more exacting in demands for good government. She cited Newfoundland, which for 101 years, has been a self-governing unit within the British Empire. Only a few weeks ago citizens of the Commonwealth petitioned the central goveernment to take them back and today Newfoundland again is ruled from London. Grafting politicians had literally stripped the resources of the country, it is said.

The present Congress in Washington, the lecturer stated, is unique in that it represents the interim between the old order and the new order, this being the only session because of the Lame Duck amendment. President Roosevelt in his message said many interesting things, she declared, one in particular, being pointed to as especially startling. The President's statement that "We are foregoing a tie which I trust will be permanent", indicates that a decided change is taking place.

Bank deposit insurance, said Miss Darrin, will be a help in bringing back confidence in the banks. The time limit placed upon the incurrences of public debt is reguarded in many quarters as a wise restriction. The action of the President with respect to silver seems wisely taken, she said, since it puts off the demands of the inflationists. At the London Economic Conference it was generally agreed that the present world supply of gold cannot adequately back the paper money of the world. The suggestion has been advanced that if we do go back on a metal standard that both metals be used. The recent statement of the President, with respect to gold leaves the yet remaining uncertainty as to whether the dollar will be stabilized at a definite figure or whether it will be allowed to fluctuate within a narrow range.

Miss Darrin spoke interestingly of her travels in England during the past summer, of her visit to Parliament, the many interesting people, including Lady Astor, whom she met.

Closing her talk with a discussion of current Broadway plays, she cited, "Sailors Beware" as being very humorous; "Men in White" in which the characters are doctors and nurses, as revealing the struggle of the business life and personal life; and Pursuit of Happiness" another highly amusing play. She also discussed the three Theatre Guild plays, including "Oh, Wilderness" by O'Neill, which featured superb acting by George M. Cohen; the revisal of Moliere's "School for Husbands", originally written 300 years ago; and Maxwell Anderson's "Mary Queen of Scots", which portrays the violent struggle between Mary and Elizabeth.

RIGHT WAYS TO READ OR WORK UNDER ARTIFICIAL LIGHT

wrong way

Never read in this position. The light shines in the girl's eyes, not on the book.

Same lamp, same couch, but this time the light falls directly on the book.

GOOD LIGHTING is by no means the whole story of good eyesight. But it is the foundation upon which EYE HEALTH is built.

For her eyes' sake teach your child to practice her music lesson, or sew, or read only by adequate, correct light.

But more important than instruction is the example you set. Is your home one in which it is easy to practice habits of EYE HEALTH? Is every room properly lighted? Is it always a simple matter to find a chair where light for reading comes from the right direction?

One of our Lighting Specialists will help you answer these questions. In a few moments he can tell whether your home is correctly lighted. Why not phone today and make arrangements for him to call? His services are free.

The Right Lamp in the Right Place

25-WATT. For wall brackets or other decorative lighting—never for reading.

40-WATT. Satisfactory for three socket reading lamps and ceiling fixtures.

60-WATT. For double socket reading lamps and some single socket lamps with narrow shades.

100-WATT. Suitable for single socket reading lamps with wide shades. Use this size for kitchen or laundry.

"Moonlight and Pretzels" At Star Beginning Sunday

"Moonlight and Pretzels" acclaimed by movie critics as one of the most tuneful and cleverly produced musicals ever to flash upon the screen, has been booked for a showing at the Star Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Manager Smith announced yesterday. Roger Pyror, Leo Carrillo, Mary Brian, Lillian Miles, Alexander Gray, Bernice Claire, Jack Denny and his orchestra, Herbert Rawlinson, Doris Carson, William Frawley and the famous Frank and Milt Britton band are only a few of what is undoubtedly the greatest assemblage of stage, screen and radio stars ever to appear together in one picture.

"Moonlight and Pretzels", a backstage romance, tells the story of George Dwight, small time vaudeville hoofer with ambition to be a big-time song writer. He finds himself stranded in a small up-state town in New York and Sally Upton, proprietor of the local music store helps him out with a job. Sally falls in love with him immediately but George is too busy trying to catch on as a song-writer to think about love. He goes to New York and scores a tremendous hit as a composer of musical comedy successes. Although Sally hasn't heard from him she feels sure that George still thinks of her and decides to come to New York to get a job in one of his shows.

The score for the Universal screen musical was writen by four of America's ace songsmiths, Jay Gorney and E. Y. Harburg, who wrote "Brother Can You Spare a Dime", Sammy Fain, Herman Hupfeld and Al Siegel. "Moonlight and Pretzels" was directed by Karl Freund and Monte Brice, with Bobby Connolly handling the dance ensembles.

Products or services sold at a loss mean distress sooner or later.

Our GOVERNMENT says the farmer shall receive a fair return; labor shall be paid a just wage; public utilities shall receive a fair margin of profit.

The bank not only renders service by extending credit (loans) but provides many necessary services. The cost of this service individually is small, but collectively it amounts to a very sizeable sum.

The NRA, through the bankers' code, has directed the banks to make a charge for all services rendered.

The Steuben County Bankers Association, of which we are a member, has adopted rules governing charges which we believe are fair to the customer and fair to the bank.
